MRS. SHERMAN'S CONFESSION.

The following from the Hartford Courier is given as the substance of Mrs. Sherman's confession:

Mrs. Sherman's story is as follows: She was born in New Brunswick, N. J., She was born in New Brunswick, N. J., in 1825, and was early left an orphan. At the age of 17 she joined the Methodist Church, and at a love feast there she met Edward S. Struck, whom she subsequently married. Struck in time became a policeman at Yorkville, one of the suburbs of New York city. One night there was a row in a saloon on his beat, and a detective was killed. Struck was off without leave. He was reprimanded and disgraced. It troubled him very much, and finally it weighed so on his mind that he became crazy and had very much, and finally it weighed so on his mind that he became crazy and had softening of the brain. He then was discharged. When he recovered it was only to be very feeble physically and unable to get work, so that he was only a burden to his wife. One day a male friend of hers suggested to her that she could get rid of the man by poison. She took kindly to the idea, and gave him arsenic in his food, and she also, with the same poison, killed their youngest two children, so that they also should not be burdens to her, and should not have, as she says, to grow up to life's

She was not suspected of this murder, and soon after it went to Litchfield, in this State, to live. Here she met one Dennis Hurlburt and married him, but she did not get along particularly satisfactorily to herself with him, and so she poisoned him.

Soon after his death she was told by a friend that there was a man in Derby, named Horatio N. Sherman, who had plenty of money, and had lost his wife, and that by skillful management, if she wanted a third husband, she could probably get him. Accordingly she went there and applied to him for the place of housekeeper in his family, and he en-gaged her, and subsequently she suc-ceeded in marrying him. He had two cessed in marrying him. He had two small children, Ada and Frankie, and these she determined to poison, and did poison, but she did not plan to poison Sherman. She intended to employ the arsenic upon the rats in her house as well as to kill the children, and she pur-chased it in New Haven, at Peck's drugstore, with the first mentioned object. She took the package home and put it on a shelf beside a similar package of sal-eratus. Sherman used to drink a great deal of cider, into which he would put saleratus to make it foam. This was his favorite drink. The saleratus and the arsenic on the shelf became mixed in some way, but she did not mix them, but saw they were so. One night some friends were present and they had some "toddy" to drink. Her husband invited her to take some, but she chose in pref-erence to drink some of his cider pre-pared to foam. Soon after she took it she went out of the house to call upon a neighbor, and was taken suddenly very sick, so badly that she was utterly unable to do anything for herself, and had to be carried into the house. But she rallied in a little while. She thinks that this sickness was due to the arsenic that had been mixed with the saleratus, and that when he died it was because of taking more of a similar preparation at a later period. In no other way did she know of his obtaining poison, and the talk of the prosecution about her putting arsenic into his tea and into his "slings" and other hot drinks was all expended on a wrong track. This was not, therefore, such a clear case of murder as the others. In fact, she merely neglected to warn him of his danger, and that she did not always remember it herself is shown in the fact of her having taken some of the It is curious that the only death for which she could not be held accountable, according to her story, should be that for which she had been convicted.
